HISTORY

In 1956 Adelaide's Botanic Park was the venue for an exhibition of architecture. Staged by the South Australian Institute of Architecture and the Royal Australian Institute of Architects, in conjunction with the Sixth Australian Architectural Convention, the exhibition was designed to foster interest in the latest developments in architecture through models and buildings. Botanic Park was the site for pavilions intended to show 'how beauty and logic can be combined to make more pleasing surroundings for daily living'. The exhibition was covered in national and international architectural journals and in the Australian and overseas press. The Architectural Convention and exhibition of 1956 changed architecture in Adelaide and beyond, introducing contemporary architecture to the South Australian public.

A Retrospective exhibition of images of this exhibition came about through the work of Colin Schumacher, Earle Scott and Keith Neighbour. It was then held in 1998 at the University of S.A. City West Campus, Yungondi Building. It has since travelled to Perth, Western Australia.

COLLECTION DESCRIPTION

This collection consists of enlarged printed photographic panels from the 1998 retrospective exhibition of an RAIA Convention Exhibition held 26 May to 16 June 1956 in the Adelaide Botanic Park in the Parklands as well as research notes and copies of original documents relating to the 1956 exhibition.

Note: See also Cheesman collection S209 for the 1956 Programmes for the Convention and for the Exhibition held in Park Lands, registration, and personal invitations to peers and lists of delegates attending with personal notations; Neighbour collection S294 for original slides, plans and ephemera; Griggs collection S167 for programmes and ephemera and Hurren collection for programmes.
