MILNE, F. Kenneth

F. Kenneth Milne (18/07/1885–3/10/1980) was one of South Australia's most well-known, prolific and popular early- to mid-twentieth century architects. He resisted modernism and remained a devotee of the Georgian style throughout his life.

After attending Glenelg Public School for his primary education and North Adelaide Public School for his secondary schooling, Milne received private finishing tuition. He began his architectural career around 1900 when he was articled to Alfred Wells. He then worked as a draftsman for Wells until 1906 when, against Wells' advice, he moved to Sydney to seek architectural experience, working as a draftsman for Robertson & Marks.

When Milne returned to Adelaide in April 1909 and established his own practice, two of his first commissions influenced his early career. The Hampstead Hotel in Grote Street (1910) led the South Australian Brewing Co. Ltd to commission hotels in both metropolitan and rural areas, and the Adelaide Oval Scoreboard (1911) was so revered that the South Australian Cricket Association became a longstanding client. Over time, Milne established a reputation for domestic architecture and he designed many large residences for wealthy members of Adelaide's establishment. However, he also undertook charitable work and at the outbreak of World War One was an honorary architect for the Red Cross (S.A. Division), a role that continued into the post-war years.

In 1912 Milne took on John Richard Schomburgk Evans as his first articled pupil. Evans completed his articles in 1915 but then enlisted to fight in World War One. He returned to Adelaide in 1920 and became Milne's first partner, the practice becoming F. Kenneth Milne and Evans. Milne's second articled pupil, Charles Alexander Russell, became a partner in 1925. After the partnership was terminated Milne operated as a sole practitioner from 1931 until 1946. Over the following decades other partners joined Milne, including Rolfe V. Boehm (1946), Lindsay C. Dawkins (1946), Russell S. Ellis (c.1947), F.P. Bulbeck (c.mid-1950s) and John Twopeny (1960).

Milne's significant Adelaide buildings include Lister House (North Terrace, 1927) and the Norwich Union Fire Insurance Society Building (Waymouth Street, 1928). Travels in Britain and Europe in 1933 awakened a keen interest in Georgian architecture, particularly the work of Robert and James Adams, and this influence can be seen in his designs for Arbury Park (c.1930s) and his own house, Sunnyside, in North Adelaide (1936).

Other important buildings include Goldsbrough House (North Terrace, 1935) and the H.C. Sleigh building (Pirie Street, 1950s). While its Georgian style was criticised, the Sleigh building illustrates a significant transition point in the state's architectural history when traditional Classical designs were still considered relevant by some architects even in the face of modernism. Reluctant to embrace modernism Milne gradually retired from practice during the period from 1956 to 1962.

Milne played an active role in the profession: he was President of the South Australian Institute of Architects (SAIA) from August 1937 to August 1939; a founding member of the Architects' Board of South Australia, which administered the Architects' Act governing the registration of architects; and helped establish the Chair of Architecture at the University of Adelaide and was a member of the Faculty of Town Planning and Architecture. This association with the University was reinforced when he established the Kenneth and Hazel Milne Travelling Scholarship in Architecture for architecture students. His contribution to architecture was recognised during his lifetime: the first SAIA Award of Merit for Domestic Architecture for Sunnyside (1944), Her Majesty's Coronation Medal (1953) and Life Fellow of the Royal Australian Institute of Architects (1970).

Notes to Milne Collection

On plans;

- Oldest plan is copy of one for Marble Hill, the now ruined Vice Regal residence.
- Plans dated 1921, 22, 23 seems to be drawn by Milne himself, most are drawn by other members of the firm.
- Some of the earlier plans are hand tinted by Milne.
- Job numbers do not always indicate sequence of jobs over time
- Item numbers do not always indicate any particular order as all the plans were in a jumble due to numerous moves of the records.
- Plans mostly for well to do people or larger firms.

MILNE, F. Kenneth COLLECTION
Architecture Museum, University of South Australia

- Plans originally came in large brown envelopes with a number on the front and the name of the client. This number is reflected on the card index.
- Materials in the collection vary and include plain newspaper, tracing and tissue paper, linen, butter paper, cartridge paper, ozalids and blueprints.
- Some plans are in very poor condition, some had to be buffered due to acidic properties or sticky adhesives. Many are folded and creased.

This series mounted in a photograph album (2 feet long by 1 foot 6 inches wide). Original list of album contents was made by Susan Woodburn when the Milne Collection was first received. The second list, in order found in the album, was made by Ann Riddle in 2001. Some pages were blank and some were unlabelled giving no idea as to who owned the house or it's location. Most plans and photos were stuck onto the pages of the album. Original stored in oversize parcels in compactus.

Architectural Drawings

Series 5
Special List

Buildings designed by F. Kenneth Milne 1916-1974. Received in numbered envelopes often containing drawings relating to more than one building, as numbering system related to a client rather than a structure. Envelopes occasionally contained related drawings of other architects, including original drawings of buildings renovated or added to by Milne and later work on buildings originally designed by Milne. A complete card index (Special List) of drawings and correspondence relating to the designs has been compiled. A copy of the card index is attached. Plans in drawers.

Personal Records of a Visit to England and Europe, 1933

Series 13

Diary of a visit to England and Europe, in March -December 1933. 2v. Original and typescript copy. The original includes sketches of details of buildings, addresses, photographs and newspaper cuttings. Touring Britain, a handbook for railways in London, and North East. It was during this visit that Milne gained the familiarity with Georgian architecture, as presented by the work of the Adam Brothers, that was to influence the designs of some of the major works subsequently undertaken by Milne. (See also S27 which contains photos, postcards and printed items).

This series/item consists of books donated in March 1982 to the Architecture Library of the South Australian Institute of Technology (University of South Australia) by John Twopeny Architects Pty Ltd. They were selected by S.A.I.T. from those held by John Twopeny and were part of the architectural firm's collection when the bulk of books were donated to the Flinders University Architecture Archive. While none of the books were owned by F. K. Milne, they were part of his firm's holdings while he was an active principal as was Mr. P. V. Boehm. Mr Lindsay Dawkins was an employee.
