

Your career in Management.

As a graduate of UniSA's Bachelor of Management, you will be well placed to enter the workforce in a wide range of business roles. Once you have developed your skills and gained experience, you will be able to pursue a career as a future leader. Businesses need people with broad skills. The Bachelor of Management is a foundation upon which to build your career. There are many opportunities within the business environment, a wide variety of roles and a diverse range of industry sectors.

If you already have management experience, the Bachelor of Management degree can enhance your career prospects and lead to more senior positions. When you graduate, you may be employed in an assisting role before gaining experience to progress to a coordinator or management role. Graduate employment programs, management traineeships or administrative roles make great starting points. If you have the right skills and qualities, it won't be long before you are ready to take on greater challenges.

Employment opportunities for Management graduates have increased significantly in the last five years and the Australian Government predicts that this trend will continue.

Which Occupations?

Some of the positions that Management graduates may apply for include: project officer, project coordinator, project manager, executive officer, business manager, strategic planning manager, public policy manager and corporate manager.

Experiential Learning.

Work Placements

Students may elect to undertake a work placement by enrolling in Management Practicum 1. Management Practicum 1 is a field placement project carried out within a company or organisation under academic and industry supervision. A requirement of the placement is the production of a comprehensive report and presentation. Student and supervisor evaluations, including personal critical reflection for the student are also an important component of the course.

Career Management Skills within Curriculum

Career management skills have been embedded throughout the curriculum. Topics covered include: self awareness, industry options, career planning and skills audit.

Case Studies and Workplace Reports

Many courses within the Management program require students to apply theory to a real-life case study. Students may also undertake workplace reports on an organisation of their choice. These case studies and reports form a part of each student's assessment.

Learning Environment

Students may participate in role plays and debates as part of courses within the Management program. These assist students to develop communication, leadership and group skills.

Developing problem solving skills are important elements of the Management program. Students engage in live problem solving activities and evaluate their own problem solving characteristics.

"I believe the two things that can help anyone studying are persistence and compromise. I persisted through a tough job search with many rejections. I also decided to compromise and settled for a job that focussed on gaining experience rather than a great salary."
