The Gavin Wanganeen Indigenous Scholarship Appeal

This is what our most recent graduates are up to:

Gavin Wanganeen and Wendy Barth

Nursing graduate Wendy Barth has been working at Calvary Hospital part-time for the final two years of her degree. Since completing her degree last year, she has been appointed Clinical Educator at the Aboriginal Health Council of South Australia, the peak body representing Aboriginal health and substance misuse services in this State. In this role she will fulfil her ambition of helping her people have a 'health voice'. Inspired by her achievements, Wendy's sister has also now enrolled in a Bachelor of Nursing.

Professor Peter Buckskin and Justin Canuto

Justin Canuto would also like to continue his studies in Arts (Aboriginal Studies) and eventually complete a Masters. Since finishing his degree, Justin has gained a position in the highly competitive Graduate Cadetship Program with the Department of Education, Employment and Workplace Relations. The Program goes for 10 months, providing a broad spectrum of training and development opportunities to build his experience and skill base.

Professor Peter Buckskin and Robert Hawkins

The scholarship enabled Visual Arts student Robert Hawkins to excel in his final year of study. He did so well, he has been accepted to do honours in 2011 and intends to complete a Masters degree and possibly a PhD. He held 16 exhibitions in 2010, and more recently exhibited at the Sydney Art School and the Adelaide Fringe. He is also a mentor at the UniSA David Uniapon College of Indigenous Education and Research and is involved in the Indigenous Tutorial Assistance Scheme.
