

Margaret Anderson

Margaret Anderson is Director of the History Trust of South Australia. In a career spanning thirty years she has worked as a public historian in various museums and taught history and Australian studies at Monash University. Her research interests include the history of women and the family, Australian demography, and the practice of public history.