

American University of Beirut
The Department of Civil and Environmental Engineering and
The Issam Fares Institute for Public Policy
& International Affairs

Cordially invite you to a lecture on

Australian Experience in Internal Negotiations and Consensus Building for Water Rights Uses and Allocations- Lessons for Developing Countries

By Professor Jennifer McKay
On Wednesday, May 23, 2007
5:30pm
Vandycke Amphitheater

Prof. Jennifer McKay is professor of Business Law in the School of Commerce, Division of Business at the University of South Australia. Prof McKay's research interests concern water law reform and in particular regulatory models for the management and allocation of water between competing uses and between competing jurisdictions. In her capacity as an expert on water policies and laws, Prof. McKay is always actively participating in conferences and committees on Water and Environmental Sustainability across the world. She is also a member of the expert committee in the Expo 2008 at Zaragoza, Spain, that will celebrate the evolving relationships between water and human societies in relation to sustainable development.